Asks...

What is the best thing you have done to improve your practice in the past year?

I call each of my surgical patients the evening after their surgery. There are often questions and issues that the patient and his or her caregivers encounter once they leave the hospital. Most of these can be easily addressed over the phone, putting the patient at ease in what can be an anxious time. I also give my business card, with my personal cell number on it, to all my surgical patients. Patients and their families genuinely appreciate knowing they can reach me any time if needed.
